DEGREE OF DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY

In Architecture & Planning:
James William Andrew Duminy
Thesis title: Scarcity, government, population: the problem of food in colonial Kenya, c. 1900-1952

James Duminy holds a BSc from Rhodes University, and MTRP and MA degrees from the Universities of KwaZulu-Natal and Leicester. In 2010, he joined the African Centre for Cities at UCT as a researcher working to enhance planning education and urban research in Africa.

James Duminy's thesis examines the origins and emergence of 'food security' practices in Kenya. Contemporary food security strategies in Africa, including those of Kenya, focus on increasing agricultural production and food availability to combat a state of resource scarcity. Previous historical research has provided an inadequate understanding of how and why this 'productionist' focus exists in contemporary food governance. Duminy uses archival records to examine how Kenyan colonial officials thought about and addressed food scarcity problems, and how this changed over time. He shows that a 'productionist' bias in anti-scarcity strategies emerged as a contingent result of local colonial events and interests interacting with wider political and economic forces. His study fills a major gap in historical knowledge of food scarcity and famine in a key African context. The research contributes to knowledge on the nature of colonial government in Kenya and Africa, and enhances understanding of why contemporary African food security strategies take the forms that they do.

In Civil Engineering:

Philemon Abuti Arito
Thesis Title: Influence of mix design parameters on restrained shrinkage cracking in non-structural concrete patch repair mortars

Philemon Arito holds a BSc(Eng) (Civil Engineering) from the University of Nairobi, Kenya, and an MSc(Eng) (Civil Engineering) from UCT.

Philemon Arito's thesis investigates the influence of multiple mix design parameters, and their corresponding interactions, on restrained shrinkage cracking in non-structural concrete patch repair mortars. He has also investigated and quantified the relative sensitivity of cracking to multiple mix design parameters and crack-determining material properties. He also used the results from his study to improve an existing empirical analytical model for predicting tensile stresses in concrete patch repair materials. The findings from his study will help inform the rational design and development of durable and effective cement-based patch repair materials in service as well as the modification and/or development of performance specifications for non-structural concrete patch repair mortars.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

Founded as the South African College (a boys' school that aimed to provide higher education as well) in 1829, the University was established as the University of Cape Town in 1918.

The early history was one of great expectations and hard times and it was not until the early years of the twentieth century that the University was developed into a fully-fledged tertiary institution. A significant and pioneering development in the 19th century was the admission of women as degree students in 1886, many years ahead of most universities in the world.

At the start of the 20th century the University incorporated the Diocesan College, the teacher training classes of the Normal College, the South African College of Music and the Cape Town Schools of Fine Art and Architecture.

The Medical School was established and in the 1920s the University began a partnership with the local health authority (now the Provincial Government's health department) that saw the Medical School move from the Hiddingh Campus and the Green Point Somerset Hospital to Observatory (the rest of UCT's Upper Campus moved from Hiddingh to its present site, on part of Cecil Rhodes' estate, in 1928). This partnership allowed for the construction of the first Groote Schuur Hospital on a University site. The partnership continues to this day and now involves not only Groote Schuur as a teaching hospital but Red Cross Children's Hospital, Valkenberg and a growing number of primary health care sites.

The period between the end of World War II and 1994 was marked by two themes. Firstly, the University recognised that if it was to be fully South African, it would have to move beyond academic non-segregation to be fully inclusive. It would have to face the consequential and increasing clashes with a government determined to legislate for segregation and enforce the doctrine of apartheid. And secondly, the University intended to transform into a leading research institution.

Before World War II, the University was largely a teaching university and its students were mostly undergraduates. The research undertaken was sporadic, though in some cases notable. A research committee was appointed for the first time in 1945. The next 75 years saw a great expansion of research and scholarly work such that the UCT of 2014 has a greater proportion of highly rated researchers and gains significantly more research grants and awards than any other South African University.

The 1980s and 1990s were characterized by the deliberate and planned transformation of the student body. This was aided by the establishment of the Academic Development Programme aimed at helping students from disadvantaged educational and social backgrounds to succeed and the desegregation of student residences. As a result, a student body that was 90% white in 1979, when UCT marked its 150th anniversary, is in 2014 more than 50% black. The total student enrolment of just above 26 000, includes international students drawn from over 100 countries, a significant proportion of which are from SADC states. Particular emphasis is placed on postgraduate studies and more than 20% of these students will be enrolled in master's and doctoral programmes. A growing number of postdoctoral fellows contribute substantially to the research endeavours and reputation of the University (UCT has more than a third of the total number of post docs in South Africa).

UCT continues to work towards its goal to be Africa's leading research university. Its success can be measured by the scope of study it offers and the calibre of its graduates.

Welcome, Wamkelekile, Welkom – today is not the end of your relationship with the university but the beginning of a new phase in your continuing relationship with UCT, one that you share with the UCT community of over 100 000 alumni.

Diverse as this community is, the shared experiences of a critical academic ethos and a spectacular campus make for a strong network that has a wide footprint, not only in South Africa, but across the continent and the globe.

We set a great store by our links with our alumni, and indeed the links alumni have with each other. We promise that we will be in touch, and ask you in turn to let us know not only your current contact details but also, from time to time, something of your lives and where you are in your careers.

*Updates can be done on the web – <http://www.uct.ac.za/dad/alumni/update/>
- or by writing to the Alumni Office, UCT, PB X3 Rondebosch 7701 or by contacting us on (27) (21) 650 3746.*

*Your alma mater looks forward to welcoming you back, whether to a public lecture, a leadership forum, your class reunion,
or just an informal call!*
